

THE HOME, ITS PROBLEMS AND ITS INTEREST

DAINTY NEGLIGEE.

The Models of the Season Are Charmingly Simple and Delicate.

The saying that woman is never so becomingly dressed as when she is dressed in simplicity, bids fair to know a fashionable fulfillment.

Things have so come about that negligees are built of the very prettiest materials that can be purchased or woven and they are so trimmed and embroidered, draped, and decorated that they enhance woman's charms a hundred fold.

The woman who thinks she can make a negligee very easily and out of any old thing, fitting it carelessly, and trimming it in any manner, will find herself mistaken, for the new negligees require a great deal of artistic skill. Their very simplicity calls for artfulness.

Many of the new models are of wash silk, which is a very nice material, for it can be kept so fresh and pretty. But it is doubtful if it can be tubbed, for the gowns are elaborately trimmed with lace of a delicate kind.

In yokes these room gowns are still more elaborate, for here the fancy and one's individual taste have abundant play. A yoke that is very fashionable is one that has a deep lace point in front with the lace fringed in such a manner that its figures set out charmingly.

The ruffled negligee is quite the most fashionable one of the season. All the new negligees are ruffled, except those of Japanese origin, and all are trimmed with lace and with ribbons. Ruffles and lace and ribbons are the rule.

And, while on the subject of ribbons, one may state that at least three out of five of the tea gowns worn in Paris and London today are run with colored ribbons. Made of colored silk, or of white silk, they are trimmed with lace and ribbon is run through the lace. This is so much the fact that the lace manufacturers have arranged their looms to accommodate the making of new laces through which ribbons can be run.

And, while running ribbons, remember the rule is the wider the ribbon the better. The very sheer white fabrics are worn all winter as negligees by dainty women. These are made with a multiplicity of tuckings and with an infinite amount of handwork. Fortunately smoking tuckings, fine embroidery and shirring can all be bought by the yard and, so, a woman can put together one of these negligees without working her whole life long upon the job.

Many of the negligees are made over thin silk and, in this case, the handsome results are obtained. Canvas made so as to show the weave, but very slick, is made up over a lustrous silk. Where this is done both should be of one color as the best results are obtained in that manner.

"Style means back." So Dickens said years ago, and the dressmakers are evidently taking it to heart. Wonderful girdles are worn, and position basques and beautiful bands of lace decorate the backs of blouses.

Red will again be much worn by young girls and an effective hat of red chenille braid has a semi-high crown with large rolling brim—the latter bordered with a band of black velvet ribbon. The only adornment on top is a bunch of red plumes.

Smoking Indoors.

It is very nice of madame to assure monsieur that he and his friends may smoke wherever he pleases in his own domicile. He thinks jolly of her. But if he could see her face next morning when she goes into the tobacco-saturated atmosphere of the library or den, reeking as it is with the stale fumes of cigars, pipes, and cigarettes, he would love her for the self-sacrificing martyr that she is.

Even the woman who enjoys tobacco smoke at night finds it loathsome next morning.

But this trial may be done away with and monsieur and his friends still enjoy their evening smoke if madame will have this precaution taken: The last thing at night let a large bowl of fresh cold water be placed in the room in which the smoking was done. Water absorbs odors. By morning it will have absorbed all the stale odors of tobacco, and the atmosphere of the room will be purified.

Handsome Blouse Set.

Handsome and unique is a blouse set of four gold pieces, one for the belt and three smaller ones for the blouse front. The unusual design is a square frame filled with a delicate lattice work of gold, with minute pearls at every intersection of the lattice, as if caught in the golden mesh.

Jet Hair Combs.

Some stunning hair ornaments are gotten up in black this fall. Apart from the handsome butterflyes perched on large jet hairpins and other designs of a purely ornamental nature, there are top combs and side combs of musical attractiveness in the jet. A few are studded with sparkling rhinestones, but the all-black are richest.

Useful to Know.

Did you know that butter or milk placed in a receptacle and then covered by an ordinary red flower put will keep fresh and sweet. The pot should be kept covered with a wet cloth, and thus, being a nonconductor of heat, keeps the contents from spoiling.

Never wash the face when just out of an ocean bath or it will blister. Wait at least two hours, and then be careful to use only hot water. If the face feels soiled a little pure cold cream applied with a soft cloth and gently removed after about ten minutes will remove all dirt and prevent the uncomfortable burning sensation induced after an immediate application of water after being exposed to the sun.

Never use a fork in stirring batter if lumps are to be avoided. A spoon is the most satisfactory utensil for such a purpose.

Cocktail Tray.

The latest addition to the collection of burnt wood articles, useful and ornamental, is the cocktail tray. This is circular in form, and is decorated with a cock rampant in burnt and illuminated work.

New Opera Cloak.

For opera cloaks and theater wraps an enchanting model has been created by one of the great couturiers. The front and back of this mysterious garment consist each of a half circle cut in velvet or cloth, an enormous half circle that reaches to the ground at its widest point in one direction, while in the other direction its widest point forms the cuff of the sleeve. Fancy a perfect circle folded in two and placed over the head of a paper doll whose arms are extended, and you will get the general movement of the cloak, which, of course, must be adjusted at the waist and wrists.—Exchange.

A Pleasant Meal.

Be as bright and cheerful as possible at meal times, especially at breakfast. Begin the day with a smiling face, even if it does require an effort, and try to hold on to that smile as much as possible during the day. Surely there will be little gleams of sunshine now and then, no matter how cloudy the outlook; and even if the day is stormy and hard, there is always a bright tomorrow to be hoped for.

O. J. LeMOLL & CO., 1321 G Street N. W.

A chic light-weight flannel cloak for little girl. It is white, striped with black. The trimming consists of bands of white broadcloth, stitched with black. White pearl buttons are used. The white felt hat is trimmed with black and white plaid ribbon.

Grape Molds in Whipped Cream.

Cover half a box of gelatine with a cup of cold water, and let it stand an hour to soften. Melt over the tonkette, add a scant quart of grape juice, the juice of one lemon and sugar to sweeten. Turn into cups and set on the ice to harden. When ready to serve turn out on individual plates and heap with sweetened whipped cream.

Cuff foundations to match the giraffe forms that have proved such a boon to home dressmakers have made their appearance this season. These sets are of tucked mousseline bound with satin.

Keeps It Handy.

No need any longer to fumble helplessly in a bag for car fare while clinging to the strap in a crowded car. The fare has to be paid just the same, and cars are still likely to be crowded, but the fare needn't be buried away in a bag or purse. It may be carried in the small pocket which distinguishes the left palm of the newest street glove. The pocket is of just the size to accommodate the requisite number of nickels for an ordinary shopping trip, and fastens securely with a flap and snap button.

"Style means back." So Dickens said years ago, and the dressmakers are evidently taking it to heart. Wonderful girdles are worn, and position basques and beautiful bands of lace decorate the backs of blouses.

$7.98 Silk Petticoats, $5.00

To every woman who loves the rustle and sheen of a Silk Petticoat the above announcement is particularly interesting. We have never before been able to show a petticoat made of such a heavy grade of pure silk (not dressed) THAT'S GUARANTEED TO WEAR, mind you, and sell it for $5.00.

They come in three styles. One has a full circular flounce, finished with rows of fine tucks, another has a deep accordion-plaited flounce, while the third has three small ruffles. The range of colors embrace the most popular blue, red, tan, green, and white, black and gun metal. Fresh from the maker, who has fashioned them extra wide over hips. They are suitable for afternoon, street, or evening wear. No one who desires a Silk Petticoat should let the chance slip to get one of these Petticoats—which would be cheap at $7.98, the regular price, for.....$5.00
